DIAMONDS. We were shown by Gov. Lyon of Lyonsdale, one day last week, a diamond about the size of a pea, which he informs us was picked up within twenty miles in a southerly direction from the Snake river ferry, by a man named Saml. Wilson, who, while prospecting in a gulch in the foothills for gold, had selected seven from the gravel as curiosities, not knowing what they were. The diamond shown us is very brilliant and is of color, with a spot of uncrystallized carbon in the center. The history, as the Governor relates it, runs thus: "While on board the steamer last May, this man Wilson came to him, stating that he had seen him in Owyhee, and after some conversation, showed him among his specimens the diamonds above mentioned. The Governor told him that they were, and upon inquiry as to where he got them, was told the story above related, after the Governor arrived in New York; he met Wilson again, and together they went to a jeweler's store where Wilson offered the largest one for sale. He was offered $800, but refused it, when he took it to a French diamond dealer, and received $1,000. Wilson made a present of the one we saw to the Governor, and promised to return and show him where he found them. Wilson started back, according to promise, in company with Surveyor-General Henry, of W. T., who also had "diamond on the brain," and arrived in San Francisco safely; but there they took passage on the ill-fated Brother Jonathan, and were lost. The Governor is quite certain that these diamonds came from the foothills east or north of this place—Owyhee, Idaho, Avalanche.

Two military officers were to fight a duel, every attempt to reconcile them having failed. To all remonstrances they replied: "We will fight to the death of one, and probably both."

A miserable wretch of a fellow came up to the seconds and said, in a voice of woe—

"I am a poor mechanic, with a large family and would—"

"My good man, don't trouble us now," cried one of the seconds; "don't you see that my friends are going to kill one another? They are not in a humor to hear you now."

"It is not charity that I ask for," replied the fellow. "I am a poor carpenter, with eight children, and my wife is sick. I have heard these two gentlemen will kill one another, and I came to see if you will let me make their coffins."

The belligerent parties overheard the novel request; it was too much for their gravity, and throwing down their weapons, they shook hands on the spot. They buried their quarrel in a good supper, not forgetting to give the poor fellow as much as he would have made if he had made their coffins.

THE FROST.

BY HANCOCK WOOD.
He went to the window of those who sleep,
And over each pane, like a fairy, crept;
Whispering to the sleeper in sleep,
That the frost was on the window-pane.
But he did not stir, and he did not see,<
That the frost was on the window-pane.
Now, just as the sun is shining,
I'll bite this blanket of frost,
And the glass of water left for me
Shall "flick" and "flick" and "flick" and "flick".

Our lady readers, who are about purchasing their furs for the winter season, ought to be informed that the morocco bags which ladies carry when they go out shopping.

A Woolly & Co. has another

Oysters are a short crop this year, and prices are at the rule from $1.80 to $2 per gallon, wholesale, and $1.00 per quart retail.
While the crop continued, the eastern shore of Chesapeake Bay was raked bare. The western shore is now accessible where the Rappahannock, York, and other rivers empty into the bay.

so long, suffocating each other is scarce, and the oysters exclude intruders, so far as possible, with a jealous vigilance.
